Home Agent's Notes

By Mrs. B. G. Anderson
Appomattox Home Agent

During the month of September, special emphasis will be placed on getting more water systems on farms and in homes in Virginia. It is hoped that Appomattox County will come in for a fair show. The 1955 Water Systems Contest is being sponsored by the Virginia Farm Electrification Council in cooperation with several water pump manufacturers and distributors. To enter the contest:

1. You must be 12 years or older.
2. You must live beyond the city water mains.
3. You must live in Virginia.

What you have to do: Complete in 50 words or less one of the following statements: "Our pressure water system helps us because.....,"; or, " We need a pressure water system because....." Prizes are as follows: first, $250; second, $100; third, $75; and eight additional prizes of $25 each. All awards are in the form of U. S. Savings Bonds.

Entry blanks for the contest are available from your home demonstration agent's office. Why not try for one of these nice prizes?

Mail your entry to: Water Systems, Blacksburg, Va. The deadline is October 15, 1955. Winners will be announced November 14.

Special Interest Meeting Sept. 30
Braided Rugs

Each woman attending will want to start her rug—and has one month in which to assemble materials. Materials needed:

1. Brown paper to work out color plan.
2. Rug making material, old or new, which is cleaned, dyed and cut into strips to right size, 1¼" for thick wool and wider for light weight wool..

In preparing material —Rip and clean old garments to be used. Sort colors that will blend well. Dip colors that are too harsh in a gray or tan dye solution to make them blend. If rug braiders are used, cut wool fabric into strips 1½" to 3" wide. As each color is cut sort into a sectional box. Sew pieces together on machine (on bias) so that strips are 1½ yards long. Press open seam.

Arrange these strands for pleasing blending of plain, striped and plaid materials. In addition, each woman will need to bring pins, thimble, large, long-eyed needle, scissors rug braiders, bodkin and heavy twine.

Be ready, and start your rug September 30. Miss Ruth Jamison, house furnishings specialist, V. P. I., will be here to instruct on making braided rugs.

Time Saving by the Master Mix

One mix for everything! It seems like a fairy story, but it really works. The cakes, muffins and cookies are especially good—and it is always ready and on hand for emergencies. This short cut turns baking into a snap. Try it.

Basic Master Mix (Makes 13 cups)
9 cups sifted all purpose flour or 10 cups sifted cake or soft flour
1/3 cup double-acting baking powder
1 tablespoon salt
2 teaspoons cream of tartar
1/4 cup sugar
2 cups shortening which does not require refrigeration.

Stir baking powder, salt, cream of tartar and sugar into the flour. Sift three times into a large mixing bowl. Cut in the shortening with a pastry blender until mix is consistency of cornmeal. Store in covered container at room temperature. To measure Master Mix, pile it lightly into cup and level off with a spatula. The Mix will keep six weeks without refrigeration. Use 3 cups of Mix for 15 to 20 biscuits.

RATTLER IN JEEP ROUTES 2

Portsmouth, Va.- Capt. John F West and Capt. George N. Sanders were riding along the highway at 40 miles-per-hour clip when a rattlesnake reared its head between them. Sanders took one look and jumped —into a roadside ditch, head first. West stuck it out for a few moments and deciding discretion was the better part of valor, jumped too. The jeep jumped, too, into a ditch, but was unscathed. The snake slithered off into the grass.

The Farmer Must Be A Good Businessman

By
Thomas C. Boushall,
President, The Bank of Virginia
Richmond, Va.

(Editor's note: The following timely article is published by request and with permission).

In this day the farmer is just as much a businessman as anyone in the retail grade, in a manufacturing firm, or in the financial field. Perhaps the only major difference is that he probably must be a better businessman. He must be the production manager, the market research director, the sales manager, and the treasurer all rolled into one. One proof that farmers are today truly business managers is the fact that the average investment per worker in agriculture is about $14,000 which is more than that in many manufacturing industries. The era has long since passed when all a successful farmer needed was some land, a green trumb, and a very little bit of capital.

No, today's farmer is every inch a businessman and most banks are coming to realize this. It seems to be more of a problem to get the farmer himself to face the fact that this is so. Once a farmer does understand fully that he must be a true businessman, he has made a long step forward.

One skill which is essential to all businessmen, including our farmer-businessman, is the ability to plan ahead. The conduct of an orderly profitable operation requires forward planning. Now, as a banker, I would be way off the reservation if I were to try to comment on some of the areas of our modern farmer's responsibilities. However, I do feel that perhaps a few words about a farmer's duties as "treasurer" of his business might be helpful. On the financial side of the farm operation the need for planning is especially important. It is much too often the case that farmers give no thought to credit needs until they become acute. Then money is often borrowed which is less than what is really needed and which is not geared to a reasonable, well-planned, repayment schedule. The most potentially profitable farm can be reduced to a break-even level, merely because of poor financial planning.

The theme of this message, then, is to urge each farmer to give careful thought to his duties as "treasurer" of his business. How can this best be done? First, it is necessary to set down a program of development for the farm over the next several years—three at least. This program should include everything the farmer would like to do in order to increase the efficiency and profitability of his operation, without regard, at this stage, for the amounts needed In making his plans the farmer would do well to remember that he is in a cost-price squeeze these days. In the last four years prices received by farmers have decreased 22 per cent, while prices paid have increased slightly. This means that the farmer must take advantage of any and all cost-saving farm marchinery and equipment if he is to keep his operation profitable.

In looking over his operation in relation to present and prospective costs and prices, the farmer may conclude that he should make a drastic change in his operation, such as a change in his type of product. Virginia farmers, for example, have to a great extent made a change from a cash-crop operation to a diversified grassland and livestock enterprise; switching from cotton and tobacco to beef, dairy, and poultry farming. Such a change can bring on serious financial problems which must be considered and solved systematically.

Once the farmers has laid out his long term program, his ability to accomplish his own objectives will in large part depend on his ability as "treasurer." His next step then is to do what the treasurer of most businesses do when faced with long range financial problems. Go and talk with the banker. Ask the banker to set a time when he will be able to talk uninterruptedly for awhile and then tell him the whole story. Nothing should be kept back. Do not gloss over the fact that a lot of money may be needed and that it may be some time before any substantial payments can be made. It is much better for the banker to know what he is getting into and be prepared to go along through any lean period from the very start. I am certain that every banker would appreciate such forward planning. Remember that the banker seldom has the time of the detailed knowledge necessary to do his customers' planning for them. As a result he may give poor advice based on anything less than the complete picture. I have no hesitation in predicting that the banker will be so pleasantly surprised at being presented with a carefully thought out, long range plan that his cooperation will be gladly given to the greatest extent possible.

The total amount of funds really needed should first be agreed upon. This may involve giving up a few frills in the program. However, the farmer should never forget that he knows his own operation much better than does the banker and important parts of the overall plan should not be sacrificed without a struggle. Next, estimates should be made of the net cash which the farmer will realize each year after payment of all his farm and living expenses and taxes. After allowing a good sum for reverses due to acts of God and plain wrong guesses, there should be left a figure which will be available for debt reduction. This figure may be zero for two or three years if a major change is planned for the farm, but this should not discourage the "farmer-treasurer" or any courageous banker. Whatever figure is arrived at is the debt payment estimated on a realistic basis. Any repayment schedule must be fitted to these estimated figures or the banker will be disappointed and the farmer severely squeezed.

In most cases some plan can be worked out to suit the farmer's needs if he has, or expects to have, a profitable operation. Mortgage money should be used for long-term low-rate borrowing. Intermediate credit can be managed by taking chattel mortgages on farm machinery, equipment and livestock. Unsecured credit can be used for short term seasonal needs. The banker will know how to work all this out but the "treasurer" must never take his eye off that important figure which he believes is the amount he can pay in any given period. This is where the line must be held from the start to the advantage of both borrower and lender.

Once the "treasurer" has completed the process described here and has signed all necessary documents and received his money, or the assurance of it, he may return to his more accustomed role of production manager and salesman. The success of these latter efforts, however, will be due in great degree to the success achieved as a financial planner and negotiator. The few steps outlined here are not difficult but they do require thought and care. It has been said that "you have to give America credit for its standard of living" and that is as true of the farmer as it is of any other American or American business. A well-planned and executed credit program will pay many dividends in both profit and peace of mind to the farmer as each year goes by.

WEDDING DATE SET IN 1872

London.- Although Rosemary Richards, 17-year-old bride-to-be, would have preferred a June wedding, the date of her wedding to Peter Hull, 25, was set in 1872. On August 4 of that year, Peter's great grandfather, Richard Hull married and declared at the wedding feast that all of his descendants should wed on the same date. Since then, his son, three grandsons, and a great granddaughter have respected his wish.

IN FASHION NOW

Sweaters are still top fall fashion news. Some will be as light as bigger and bulkier knitted cardigans. Still others will have the new long lines and colors of all shapes.

A new double-breasted design made of heavy-knit will be popular for day and evening wear. The jewel-ed cashmere is the same color as the dress.

The print cardigan with the design knitted into the sweater will be interesting and most flattering with the background color repeated in the skirt or pull-over. The tweed knitted cardigans and pull-overs offered by some companies can be teamed with a matching skirt of wool tweed material.

Fall and winter cottons will be often seen in all sections of the country. There will be many novel weaves to choose from. Most of the clothes made from this fabric will be informal or town-dress in mood.

A great many suits of cotton tweed will be on the market. Some of these suits are beautifully tailored and look much more expensive than they actually are.

Appomattox is a growing town.

Vera

Vera, Aug. 30.- We can hardly realize that summer is over and that children will soon be in school again.

The farmers are having beautiful weather for cutting tobacco and filling their silos.

We are glad that Mr. C. E. Lewis is back at home from the hospital, much improved. We hope that he may soon be well.

Mrs. T. C. Harvey and Mazie attended the Young Peoples' Rally at Concord Church on Friday.

Much sympathy is expressed to Mr. W. J. Covington, Jr. having his mill burned, and the farmers who lost their wheat.

Mrs. Lester B. Harvey, Mrs. T. C. Harvey, Mazie and Harriette, and Miss Marguerite Gilliam visited in the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Harvey in Richmond on Sunday.
